Wine Style

All white grade varieties (and therefore wine) can be made into four different styles and tasted as a:

- Dry meaning opposite to sweet
- Medium Dry meaning dry with a touch of pleasant fruit flavour
- Fruity meaning fruity flavours that linger on your tongue refreshingly
- Sweet meaning Luscious

Red Grape Varieties:

All red grade varieties (and therefore wine) can be made into three different styles and tasted as:

- Dry meaning opposite to sweet
- Medium Dry meaning dry with a touch of pleasant fruit flavour
- Fruity meaning fruity flavours that linger on your tongue

Another component of wine that adds 'weight' to the palate is alcohol. Both white and red wine styles vary in their percentage of alcohol, eg

- a typical light bodied wine can range from 5 – 11% alcohol
- a typical medium bodied wine can range from 11.5 – 13%
- a typical full bodied wine can range from 13.5 – 14.5%

Good to know

- Calories in red wine is about the same in white, about 100-150 per glass depending on the alcohol level.
- A screw on cap is no longer an indication of bad or cheap wine. On the contrary, many premium wines now have screw caps, especially wines from Australia.
- Wine storage is critical to bring out the best taste. You don't need a wine cellar but it should never get too hot or cold. Wine serving temperature for reds is in the 60 degree Fahrenheit range and whites from the mid 50s to mid 60s F.
